Egyptian Wine

Wine making evolved in ancient Egypt. Evidence of wine could clearly be seen on paintings on pottery and tombs paintings depicting slaves harvesting grapes. A recent discovery found traces of wine deep inside the tombs of Scorpion I, one of the first Pharaohs of Egypt

Let's start your Voyage

France is arguably the world's most important wine-producing country. For centuries it has produced wine in greater quantity, and many would suggest greater quality, than any other. Wine is historically engrained in French culture at almost every level of society, it is the drink of royalty and a key symbol in Roman Catholicism, France's majority religion.

The enduring attraction of French wine is not necessarily its volume or prestige, however, but in the variety of styles available. Consumer preferences have changed over the centuries, encouraging the development of new styles of wine from the terrain and grape varieties available to France's vigneronns. Red, white, rose, sweet, dry, sparkling, opulent, austere, fruity or mineral-scented, French vineyards have produced wines to match each of these descriptors.
